

K. A. Taipale

K. A.

TAIPALE, BA, JD (New York University); MA, EdM, LLM (Columbia University), is the founder and executive director of the Center for Advanced Studies in Science and Technology Policy, an independent, non-partisan research and advisory organization focused on information, technology, and national security policy.

Mr. Taipale is also a senior fellow at the World Policy Institute where he serves as director of the Global Information Society Project and the Program on Law Enforcement and National Security in the Information Age (PLENSIA). He is also an adjunct professor of law at New York Law School where he teaches Cybercrime, Cyberterrorism, and Digital Law Enforcement.

Additionally, Mr. Taipale serves on the Markle Task Force on National Security in the Information Age; the Science and Engineering for National Security Advisory Board of The Heritage Foundation; and the LexisNexis Information Policy Forum.

Mr. Taipale is also a partner of Stilwell Holding LLC, a private investment firm specializing in the technology, media, communications, and engineered products industries and serves on the advisory board of Parkview Ventures, a technology focused merchant bank.

Mr. Taipale was previously the director of new media development for Columbia Innovation Enterprise at Columbia University where he was earlier the associate director and a senior fellow at the Institute for Learning Technologies where he also taught graduate courses in communications.

Prior thereto, Mr. Taipale was a vice president, and a managing director of the London office, of Lazard Frères & Company, investment bankers. Earlier he was the senior corporate development officer of The Pullman Company, a Fortune 500 technology, transportation, defense, and aerospace manufacturing company, and, prior thereto, a lawyer with the firm Davis Polk & Wardwell.

Mr. Taipale is a frequent invited speaker and is the author of numerous academic papers, journal articles, and book chapters on information, technology, and national security issues. [publications] He has extensive professional experience in a wide variety of diverse endeavors and with many kinds of complex issues and transactions. He has worked with international and national corporations, government agencies and other public institutions, as well as start-up companies and not-for-profit organizations. He has served on the board or advisory board of several companies and non-profit organizations.

Mr. Taipale has also helped develop, secure funding for, and implement a number of non-profit information technology related projects, including the Harlem Environmental Access Project, the Advanced Media in Education Project, and others.

Mr. Taipale received his B.A. in psychology from New York University and his J.D. from the New York University School of Law. He also received his M.A. and his Ed.M. in communications from Columbia University and his LL.M. from the Columbia Law School.

